

when we were queens.

Olga Strachna | Photo Staff

Saturday, SPIRIT, an organization that promotes African-American culture, held its annual fashion show. Along with fashion, the show included music and dance performances. Pictured here is a scene from "When we were queens," a portion of the show dedicated to the style of high-society women in colonial Africa, choreographed by senior English major Louisa Kinoshi. The final act of the fashion show, which is always dedicated to a cause, raised awareness about HIV.